

Please, no
annoying cell phones used on airplanes!

RECEIVED & INSPECTED

JAN 28 2005

FCC - MAILROOM

Gentlemen,

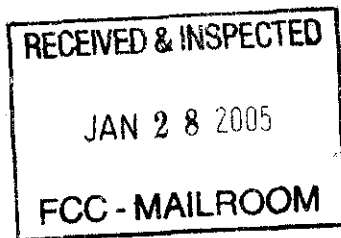

Please! No!

Please do not lift the ban
on cell phones on airlines.

We are all subjected to others' phone conversations at every turn, every day. Airline passengers are a "captive audience" so have even greater justification for requesting a ban on constant phone conversations. In addition, many of us need to get work done on plane trips so we can have more family time upon landing.

Sincerely,

Judith H. Culley

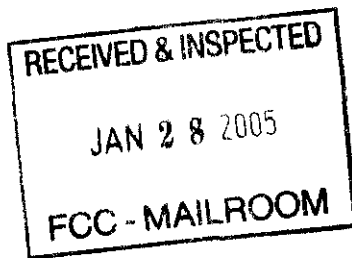

12/26/04

Docket # WT04-4351/use of cell phones during flights

Please do not consider allowing the use of cell phones during flights. The hour at the gate listening to one-sided conversations is barely tolerable. Forcing passengers to listen to the conversations of their seat partners would be untenable. Can you imagine the level of noise were even half the passengers engaging in cell phone use? As it is I have done everything I can to avoid flying over the last two years due to the overall discomfort of the process.

Pamela Edgar

1374 4th Street SW
Washington, DC 20024
January 6, 2005

Federal Communication Commission
445 12th Street SW
Washington, DC 20024

Dear Sir or Madam,

Please do not authorize use of cell phones on airplanes. There are too many models of various brands, types and years to possibly test them all for interference of navigational equipment. Remember the Swiss Air crash at Peggy's Cove, Nova Scotia.

Sincerely yours,

Donald H Flanders
202-484-8160